In the springtime the young man's fancy fondly turns to thoughts of ball games.

If President Wilson was our brother and stuck to his resolution not to appoint any of his relatives to public office, there would be trouble in the family.

Thieves Sunday stole $350,000 worth of money and jewelry from a pawnbroker's vault in New York City and we expect that the thieves had about as much moral right to the goods as the pawnbrokers.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield may be the right man for the place but it would take less to convince us that this is so, if we had never seen his picture.

We sometimes wonder whether we are running this paper or the paper is running us.

Is it fair or even honest for a newspaper to take a merchant's money for advertising and then urge it's readers to buy of his competitors?

There is one crop that never fails, the crop of suckers, and it is always bountiful and ready for the harvest.

A Good Sign.

In another column of this issue will be found a notice of the services at the Presbyterian church this week. It is there announced that the pulpit at that church was filled one night by the minister of the Christian church, the next night by the minister of the Baptist church and the next night by the minister of the Methodist church.

We are pleased to make such an announcement and we are glad to see that these pastors are broad enough and liberal enough to give us the opportunity to make it. It augurs good for this community. Men, who have dedicated their lives to such a great work as preaching the teachings of Jesus Christ must not be narrow and bigoted, if they are going to accomplish anything.

There has always been too much theology preached and not enough of Christ's teachings. Too much stress has always been laid on how a man worshiped. The important thing in the minds of many has seemed to be whether one complied with certain forms and not whether he did certain things and there is still too much of this.

Men, after much study and thought have taken certain passages from the Bible and said if one was to enter Heaven he must do so and so. Other men equally wise and after equal study and thought have construed these passages differently and said if you would go to Heaven you must do so and so. Creeds and disciplines have then been written and nothing left to the individual to decide for himself. It is always easy to raise technicalities, to quibble and dispute over immaterial things.

Throughout all of the teachings of Christ, one thought is always predominant, love. He is the greatest teacher of love. In almost everyone of his utterances he speaks of it's necessity and wonderful power and even when the word is not used he is still urging love. Love is necessary for justice, for faith, for hope, for charity, for fidelity. It is a part, the most essential part, of all these. No theologian, no matter how wise or how learned, can dispute that Christ said love was the greatest of all things. We have no quarrel with any one who thinks that the Bible teaches we should worship in a certain way, but we do think that he has no right to say, because we construe it in a different way that we are damned. But he will say, "I do not say so, the Bible says you will. I am simply going by it." He is very certain about this, but the following words of Christ do not seem to have impressed him as being so important.

"I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; Naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me. x x x Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me. x x x Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

Christ said that the King will say to those who listened not to the cry of the hungry, thirsty, homeless and naked: "Depart from me, ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

When Christ was asked what was the first and great commandment, he answered: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

"This is the first and great commandment."

"And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

"On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

And here is another of His injunctions, that we fear that none of us follow: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them, which despitefully use you and persecute you."

There is also the Golden Rule: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Why not make the above quotations the creed and discipline of a church and do away with man made creeds and rules. We believe that all churches are working for one end, the advancements of the religion of Christ and thereby the betterment of mankind. Could not this be done better by a united church, without squabbling and bickering and controversy over technicalities. We believe that this day will come and that a sign of its coming is ministers going from their own church and assisting the pastor of another sect in evangelistic services.
